Petitioner:

Beneficiary:

PETITION: Petition for Special Immigrant Religious Worker Pursuant to Section 203(b)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(4), as described at Section 101(a)(27)(C) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(27)(C)

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The employment-based immigrant visa petition was denied by the Director, Vermont Service Center. The Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) summarily dismissed a subsequent appeal. The matter is now before the AAO on a motion to reconsider. The motion to reconsider will be granted; the petition will be denied.

The petitioner is a church. It seeks to classify the beneficiary as a special immigrant religious worker pursuant to section 203(b)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(4), to perform services as an education director and bible teacher. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that the position qualified as that of a religious worker. The director also determined that the petitioner had not established that the beneficiary had been engaged continuously in a qualifying religious vocation or occupation for two full years immediately preceding the filing of the petition or that the petitioner had extended a valid job offer to the beneficiary.

A motion to reconsider must state the reasons for reconsideration and be supported by any pertinent precedent decisions to establish that the decision was based on an incorrect application of law or Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) policy. 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(3). A motion to reopen must state the new facts to be provided and be supported by affidavits or other documentary evidence. 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(2).

The petitioner's appeal was summarily dismissed for failing to state a basis for the appeal. Counsel indicated on the Form I-290B that a separate brief and/or evidence would be submitted within 30 days of submission of the appeal. At the time of the AAO's previous decision, no further documentation had been received.

On motion, counsel submits evidence that a brief was delivered to the AAO's previous address and signed for by personnel there. Counsel also submits a copy of the brief. This evidence is sufficient to reopen the AAO's decision and consider the appeal on the merits.

In addition to the brief, counsel submitted additional documentation.

Section 203(b)(4) of the Act provides classification to qualified special immigrant religious workers as described in section 101(a)(27)(C) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(27)(C), which pertains to an immigrant who:

- (i) for at least 2 years immediately preceding the time of application for admission, has been a member of a religious denomination having a bona fide nonprofit, religious organization in the United States;

- (ii) seeks to enter the United States--

- (I) solely for the purpose of carrying on the vocation of a minister of that religious denomination,

- (II) before October 1, 2008, in order to work for the organization at the request of the organization in a professional capacity in a religious vocation or occupation, or

(III) before October 1, 2008, in order to work for the organization (or for a bona fide organization which is affiliated with the religious denomination and is exempt from taxation as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Code of 1986) at the request of the organization in a religious vocation or occupation; and

(iii) has been carrying on such vocation, professional work, or other work continuously for at least the 2-year period described in clause (i).

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(1) echoes the above statutory language, and states, in pertinent part, that “[a]n alien, or any person in behalf of the alien, may file a Form I-360 visa petition for classification under section 203(b)(4) of the Act as a section 101(a)(27)(C) special immigrant religious worker. Such a petition may be filed by or for an alien, who (either abroad or in the United States) for at least the two years immediately preceding the filing of the petition has been a member of a religious denomination which has a bona fide nonprofit religious organization in the United States.” The regulation indicates that the “religious workers must have been performing the vocation, professional work, or other work continuously (either abroad or in the United States) for at least the two-year period immediately preceding the filing of the petition.”

8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(3) states, in pertinent part, that each petition for a religious worker must be accompanied by:

(ii) A letter from an authorized official of the religious organization in the United States which (as applicable to the particular alien) establishes:

(A) That, immediately prior to the filing of the petition, the alien has the required two years of membership in the denomination and the required two years of experience in the religious vocation, professional religious work, or other religious work.

The petition was filed on January 23, 2001. Therefore, the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary was continuously working as a religious worker throughout the two-year period immediately preceding that date.

To establish eligibility for special immigrant classification, the petitioner must establish that the specific position that it is offering qualifies as a religious occupation as defined in these proceedings. The statute is silent on what constitutes a “religious occupation” and the regulation states only that it is an activity relating to a traditional religious function. The regulation does not define the term “traditional religious function” and instead provides a brief list of examples. The list reveals that not all employees of a religious organization are considered to be engaged in a religious occupation for the purpose of special immigrant classification. The regulation states that positions such as cantor, missionary, or religious instructor are examples of qualifying religious occupations. Persons in such positions must perform services directly related to the creed and practice of the religion. The regulation reflects that nonqualifying positions are those whose duties are primarily administrative or secular in nature.

CIS therefore interprets the term “traditional religious function” to require a demonstration that the duties of the position are directly related to the religious creed of the denomination, that the position is defined and recognized by the governing body of the denomination, and that the position is traditionally a permanent, full-time, salaried occupation within the denomination.

Further, while the determination of an individual's status or duties within a religious organization is not under CIS's purview, the determination as to the individual's qualifications to receive benefits under the immigration laws of the United States rests with CIS. Authority over the latter determination lies not with any ecclesiastical body but with the secular authorities of the United States. Matter of Hall, 18 I&N, Dec. 203 (BIA 1982); Matter of Rhee, 16 I&N Dec. 607 (BIA 1978).

The petitioner states that the beneficiary's duties will include "preparing for and teaching Bible studies to the youth members of the church, developing, organizing and directing study programs, supervising instructions to church staff, and striving to improve the overall quality of the children's educational programs as well as other religious activities which benefit the church members."

The director determined that the duties as described do not describe a religious occupation within the meaning of the statute, and that although some of the duties appear to require a measure of religious training, they would not constitute working primarily in the capacity of a religious worker.

On appeal, the petitioner stated that because of the religious duties involved, the person holding the position must have religious training beyond that of the average dedicated and caring member of the congregation. Counsel submitted a copy of a job advertisement from another church that indicates the position in that organization required religious training or education. Counsel argues that in the present case, the beneficiary possesses both.

Nevertheless, the petitioner has not established that the position of education director and bible teacher is a position defined and recognized by the governing body of the denomination, or that the position is traditionally a permanent full-time salaried occupation within the religious denomination. Although the beneficiary has worked for the petitioner for a number of years, there is no evidence in the record to establish that this position existed prior to the beneficiary assuming the duties. There is no evidence in the record to establish that the position is one that exists in the denomination outside of the petitioner church or that the Korean American Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia or the Korean American Presbyterian Church General Assembly defines the position and recognizes the position as a traditionally religious occupation within the denomination.

The evidence presented by the petitioner does not establish that the position qualifies as that of a religious occupation within the meaning of the statute.

The petitioner states that the beneficiary has worked continuously in the position since 1989. The legislative history of the religious worker provision of the Immigration Act of 1990 states that a substantial amount of case law had developed on religious organizations and occupations, the implication being that Congress intended that this body of case law be employed in implementing the provision, with the addition of "a number of safeguards . . . to prevent abuse." See H.R. Rep. No. 101-723, at 75 (1990).

The statute states at section 101(a)(27)(C)(iii) that the religious worker must have been carrying on the religious vocation, professional work, or other work continuously for the immediately preceding two years. Under former Schedule A (prior to the Immigration Act of 1990), a person seeking entry to perform duties for a religious organization was required to be engaged "principally" in such duties. "Principally" was defined as more than 50 percent of the person's working time. Under prior law a minister of religion was required to demonstrate that he/she had been "continuously" carrying on the vocation of minister for the two years immediately preceding the time of application. The term "continuously" was interpreted to mean that one did not take up any other occupation or vocation. Matter of B, 3 I&N Dec. 162 (CO 1948).

Later decisions on religious workers conclude that, if the worker is to receive no salary for church work, the assumption is that he/she would be required to earn a living by obtaining other employment. Matter of Bisulca, 10 I&N Dec. 712 (Reg. Comm. 1963) and Matter of Sinha, 10 I&N Dec. 758 (Reg. Comm. 1963).

The term "continuously" also is discussed in a 1980 decision where the Board of Immigration Appeals determined that a minister of religion was not continuously carrying on the vocation of minister when he was a full-time student who was devoting only nine hours a week to religious duties. Matter of Varughese, 17 I&N Dec. 399 (BIA 1980).

In line with these past decisions and the intent of Congress, it is clear, therefore that to be continuously carrying on the religious work means to do so on a full-time basis. That the qualifying work should be paid employment, not volunteering, is inherent in those past decisions which hold that, if the religious worker is not paid, the assumption is that he/she is engaged in other, secular employment. The idea that a religious undertaking would be unsalaried is applicable only to those in a religious vocation who in accordance with their vocation live in a clearly unsalaried environment, the primary examples in the regulations being nuns, monks, and religious brothers and sisters. Clearly, therefore, the qualifying two years of religious work must be full-time and salaried. To hold otherwise would be contrary to the intent of Congress.

The petitioner submitted a calendar detailing the petitioner's duties for the years 1999 and 2000. The work schedule reflects that the beneficiary worked for the petitioner only on Sundays. The evidence does not establish that the beneficiary worked full time for the petitioner and does not establish that she worked continuously in a qualifying religious occupation for the two years immediately preceding the filing of the visa classification preference petition.

The director determined that the petitioner has established it qualifies as a religious organization under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. We withdraw that determination. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(3)(i) states, in pertinent part:

(3) Initial evidence. Unless otherwise specified, each petition for a religious worker must be accompanied by:

(i) Evidence that the organization qualifies as a nonprofit organization in the form of either:

(A) Documentation showing that it is exempt from taxation in accordance with § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 as it relates to religious organizations (in appropriate cases, evidence of the organization's assets and methods of operation and the organization's papers of incorporation under applicable state law may be requested); or

(B) Such documentation as is required by the Internal Revenue Service to establish eligibility for exemption under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 as it relates to religious organization..

To meet the requirements of 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(3)(i)(A), a copy of a letter of recognition of tax exemption issued by the Internal Revenue Service is required. In the alternative, to meet the requirements of 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(3)(i)(B), a petitioner may submit such documentation as is required by the Internal Revenue Service to establish eligibility for exemption under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 as it relates to religious organizations. This documentation includes, at a minimum, a completed Internal Revenue Service Form 1023, the Schedule A supplement which applies to churches, and a copy of the organizing instrument of the church which contains a proper dissolution clause and which specifies the purposes of the organization.

The petitioner submitted a 1992 letter from the IRS granting tax-exempt status to the Korean American Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia. A letter from the general secretary of the Korean American Presbyterian General Assembly states that the petitioner is "officially affiliated in good standing to the Korean American Presbyterian Church" in Philadelphia. The record does not establish that the Korean American Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia was granted a group tax exemption by the IRS, nor does it establish that the petitioner is covered under any other group tax exemption.

The evidence presented does not establish that the petitioning organization qualifies as a nonprofit religious organization.

Beyond the decision of the director, the petitioner has not established that it has the ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered salary. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner submitted copies of checks issued by it in the amount of approximately $795.00 and made payable to the beneficiary for the months January 1999 through January 2001. This annualized salary of $9,540 is less than the $10,404 the petitioner states that it paid the beneficiary and far less than the $18,200 it proposes to pay her. The petitioner also submitted copies of a certified public accountant's "review reports" of its financial statements for the years 1999 and 2000 and a copy of its July 2000 bank statement.

The review reports are based primarily on representations of management, and the CPA expressed no opinion as to whether they present fairly the financial position of the employer for the years in question. In light of this, limited reliance can be placed on the validity of the facts presented in the financial statements that have been submitted. No further supporting documentation is included in the record to reflect the assertions contained within the unaudited financial statements.

The above-cited regulation states that evidence of ability to pay “shall be” in the form of tax returns, audited financial statements, or annual reports. The petitioner is free to submit other kinds of documentation, but only in addition to, rather than in place of, the types of documentation required by the regulation. In this instance, the petitioner has not submitted any of the required types of evidence.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden. Accordingly, the decision of the director will be affirmed. The petition is denied.

ORDER: The petition is denied.
